After the first cohort's success, Emeritus launches the second Silicon Valley AI Immersion (study tour) for Indian C-suite

SPOTLIGHT / Jul 4, 2024, 12:00 IST

SHARE PRINT AA FOLLOW US

Artificial intelligence (AI) has rapidly transformed diverse industries, revolutionising sectors like automation, data analytics, and natural language processing. Forrester Research highlights the significant investments by high-growth leaders in AI, underlining the imperative for CXOs to formulate a comprehensive AI strategy aligned with their organisation's goals. This entails identifying areas where AI can drive innovation, allocating resources to AI research and development, and fostering collaboration to unlock AI's full potential.

To facilitate this journey of understanding and implementing AI, Emeritus, a global education leader, introduces the second batch of Silicon Valley AI Immersion Programme, set in Silicon Valley. This exclusive initiative aims to empower C-Suite executives by immersing them in the heart of the world's tech and innovation hub, forging international business relations and deepening their grasp of global business dynamics and AI.

This immersive 6-day and 7-night program is tailored for senior executives and provides access to prestigious institutions like Stanford and Wharton. Participants engage in personalised learning sessions and fireside chats with visionary leaders like Steve Hoffman, Pieter Abbeel, etc., from Silicon Valley, the global epicentre of technological innovation. This unique opportunity enables CXOs to gain firsthand insights, build connections with influential figures, and position themselves at the forefront of tech advancements.

One of the programme alumni, Suresh Jain, Chairman, Sun Capital Group, shared his experience for one of the sessions and said "Thrilled to have attended Pieter Abbeel's enlightening master class on the future of AI at UC Berkeley in SF today! A true luminary in the field, Abbeel's impact spans across academia, industry, and entrepreneurship. From his pioneering work with OpenAI to his current ventures, including his company Covariance and his fund AIX Ventures, Abbeel continues to shape the trajectory of AI and robotics. His insights into robotics foundational models illuminate the path towards transformative opportunities. Grateful for the chance to learn from a visionary leader at the forefront of innovation!"

Silicon Valley AI Immersion Programme aims to empower CXOs and empower their organisations by offering a set of unique benefits:

Expand your viewpoint

Engage in dynamic discussions: Deepen your understanding of AI and technology through face-to-face conversations with pioneers in Silicon Valley.

Connect with peers: Network with professionals across various industries, paving the way for future collaborations.

Gain wisdom from the best: Revitalize your business and leadership strategies with insights from esteemed global leaders and academics.

Empower your organisation to thrive:

Lead the change: Immerse your organisation in transformative AI concepts from Silicon Valley, embedding innovation into its core.

Expand your horizons: Lay the foundation for potential collaborations to elevate your organisation's position in the global technology landscape.

State takes 500 acres from closed units, to give them to new takers

sarthak.g / Jul 9, 2024, 05:04 IST

Kolkata: Bengal govt has recovered about 500 acres from closed industrial units which would be given to new industries willing to expand in the state, said state industry minister Shashi Panja on Monday. The move comes after CM Mamata Banerjee's announcement that the state would reclaim unused land meant for industrial purposes.

Speaking at the unveiling of INDPLAS'25 — a plastics exhibition which will be organised by the Indian Plastics Federation at Biswa Bangla Mela Prangan from Feb 28 to March 3 next year — Panja said, "We are identifying unused land along the state and national highways.

The plastic manufacturers want to operate close to the city. They are looking at opportunities in Howrah, Hooghly, North 24 Parganas and South 24 Parganas." Panja said unregistered plastic units were under the scanner.

Ashok P Jajodia, chairman of the exhibition, said the plastic industry needed a deep sea port to import raw materials and export finished products and called for the expedited development of the Tajpur deep sea port project.

Asked about the status of the project, Panja told reporters that it was being monitored by the CM.

The president of the federation, Lalit Agarwal, said, "The plastic industry of the state is seeing a robust growth at a rate of 12% to 15%, against a national average of 6%-7%. Plastic manufacturers constitute about 90% of the MSME sector in the state. Besides, big players are also expanding in Bengal. We can foresee that the future of the plastic industry is in eastern India."

Jajodia told the minister that the space of Milan Mela ground is not big enough to hold the plastic exhibition, and a venue double its size is needed to accommodate all visitors. "The space is spread over about 20,000 sq metre, of which only 9,000 sq metre is allotted to the exhibitors," he said.
